PREFACE

THE ancient Register Book of the Lords of Gormanston is primarily an entry book of the title-deeds of their estates at the end of the fourteenth century. It was compiled for the most part in the years 1397-8 for the then lord of that manor, Sir Christopher de Preston, elder son of Sir Robert de Preston, Chief Justice of the Court of Common Bench, and afterwards Keeper of the Great Seal in Ireland, who had died in the preceding year, 1396.

Sir Christopher was at this time about forty years of age, and was possessed of considerable fortune through his marriage with the co-heiress of Sir William de Londres. Having now inherited his father's estates, and being settled in his chief manor of Gormanston, he seems to have turned his attention to the family muniment chest. Two generations of lawyers, and several marriages with heiresses representing some of the great houses descended from the chiefs of the Norman Settlement, had added much to the large mass of ordinary conveyances of lands or houses which represented the accumulation during three generations of active business men steadily building up the family property. All helped to fill the muniment chest at the chief manor house at Gormanston.

Sir Christopher must have looked upon the old deeds largely in the light of their antiquarian interest, for though the primary purpose of the book was to preserve in convenient form a record of the evidences of the titles of the family estates, he happily admitted into the collection transcripts of many early documents, including some of the largest entries in the book, which did not relate to property ever in the possession of his family, and which could have interested him only as an antiquary. Many of these early documents would have remained unknown to history but for Sir Christopher's happy preservation of them here.

It will be convenient briefly to sketch the history of the Preston family and its connexions so far as they are illustrated in the documents preserved here.

PRESTON FAMILY AND ITS DOCUMENTS.

The family of Preston, as told in the documents recorded in the Register, originated with one Adam, son of Philip, a townsman of Preston in Lancashire, towards the close of the thirteenth century. The property acquired by this Adam and his family may be traced among the Preston section of deeds (pp. 87 to 110 of this book). It was very considerable, but the statement made by D'Alton in his History of Drogheda that they were lords of Preston is obviously unfounded. The want of a fixed surname at first and the frequent recurrence of the same Christian name make it sometimes difficult to be certain of all the family connexions. Thus a Robert, son of Roger, is frequently mentioned among the early deeds in the Register, and therefore was probably a member of the family, but he obviously belonged to an earlier generation than the bearer of that name in the Gormanston pedigree. This earlier Robert, son of Roger, was in 1307 one of the Members of Parliament for Preston in conjunction with Richard Banastre, to whom he was probably related.

Adam, son of Philip of Preston, had three sons, William, Richard, and Roger. The two former were merchants who frequently traded across the Irish sea. Nearly opposite Preston on the western side of the sea stands Drogheda. The rich plains to which Drogheda and Dublin afford access from the sea were at this time great wheat-producing lands. The wars of Edward I had drawn freely on these parts for the supply of grain for the maintenance of the armies in Wales and Scotland, and even in Gascony. The already extensive wine trade of Drogheda was further stimulated by large demands for supplies of wine for Edward's armies in his Scottish wars. These demands led to greatly increased traffic between Drogheda and Scotland and the North of England. Wine could be brought from Bordeaux more directly to Drogheda and thence to the military base at Carlisle, or on the west coast of Scotland, than by the use of any English port. The long continuance of these wars may well have given the impression to the Preston people that the trade centres were passing to the other side of the sea, and that the ports there offered a more active field for their energies, ambition, and capital.

Early in the fourteenth century, two of the sons of Adam, son of Philip, are found in Drogheda. The family had not yet adopted a fixed surname. Its members in Preston were known as "Roger son of Adam," "Adam son of Philip." When abroad they were naturally further described as "of Preston." And henceforth "de Preston" or "of Preston," and finally simply "Preston" became the recognized family name.

The first of the brothers to establish himself permanently in Drogheda was William. In 1307 he married Margery or Margaret, daughter of one John Cosyn of that town, and received with her, as a marriage portion, a messuage in the East Street of Drogheda. Between 1311 and 1321 we find him adding to his stake in the town by acquiring conveyances of nine other tenements. By 1313 he was fully established there, and described as burghess of the town. By this time his brother Richard had thrown in his lot with William, and in this year and 1316 they jointly received conveyances of four premises in the town.

They had not, however, wholly severed their connexion with Lancashire. In 1318 we find the names of Richard de Preston and William de Preston among the adherents of the Earl of Lancaster who were pardoned by the king. It is not perhaps certain that these were the two sons of Adam, son of Philip. But it is noteworthy that henceforward both brothers are found fixed in Drogheda and acting much together.

Four years later they had so thriven that the two brothers were in 1322 recipients of a special letter from the King, asking their aid to Sir Robert de Leyburn, admiral of the ships in the western sea, in the king's service against the Scots.

In this and the following year they were actively engaged in trade with England, and, no doubt in return for their assistance to the King's navy, they received special letters of protection and safe conduct to facilitate them in their journeys. They on their part undertook not to convey victuals to, or communicate with, the Scots or Flemings.

In 1326 Richard de Preston was appointed by the Crown, Constable of the Castle of Drogheda. The constablership was at this time probably not a military appointment. Later in this century all that remained unruined of the castle was the gaol, and this may very likely have been the case at the time of Richard's appointment, though as a sum had been spent in putting the fortification of the town in repair during Bruce's invasion, the castle may still have been in a defensive state.

Meanwhile the brothers had begun to acquire landed property. In 1319 William became possessed of Gaffney, Co. Meath; and in 1327 he obtained from the King a grant of the land of Arthurstown or Fingalstown, forfeited by Sir Hugh de Lacy for rebellion in joining with the Scottish invaders (p. 53). In this year also Richard received a grant of Richardstown.

In 1333 they severed their connexion with Preston, transferring their possessions there to their brother Roger (p. 90). By 1346 they were so far forgotten in their former home, that William, finding it necessary to send a deed there, under his seal, had to get it verified by having affixed the seal of the town of Drogheda, as his own seal "is unknown to many" (p. 90).

Meanwhile the third brother of the Preston family remained in England, where he must have studied and practised law. He, too, was much in his native town, where he is found acquiring property in 1314 and 1315. He married a lady of the same town, Matilda, daughter of Robert, son of Adam of Preston. This marriage may have taken place about 1312, when the bride's mother, Margaret Banastre, a member of a leading Preston family, at this time a widow, is found confirming her daughter's possession of the land given by her father (p. 108).

Roger does not appear in Ireland until 1326. As at this time his brothers seem to have been in favour here, it may have been through their influence that he was appointed 8th July, 1326, second justice of the Justiciar's Court, which at this time represented the later Court of King's Bench. In 1328 (22nd Aug.), after the accession of Edward III, he had a new patent to this office. On 27th February, 1331, he was transferred to the Bench or Court of Common Pleas.

By this time he had made a home near his brothers in Drogheda, where he had acquired two houses in 1329 and three others in 1331, in which year we find him described as a burgess of that town.

He had also kept up his connexion with his old home in Preston, where he received four conveyances in the years 1328-9. By 1333 he seems again to have settled there, and we find (p. 90) his brothers conveying their property in that town to him. But he was not permitted to remain away from Ireland. At the beginning of the following year, 7th January, 1334, he received the royal command to return to Ireland and again take up his old duties as one of the justices of the Justiciar's Court, for which the King's commission had been sent in the preceding October. He had of course now to set out for Ireland, leaving his affairs in England in the hands of Albred, son of Robert, his brother-in-law.

In 1337, August 10th, he was removed from office, receiving probably as a matter of additional security the King's pardon for any liability for trespasses with which he might be charged.

In 1341 he made the beginning of his Irish landed estate by acquiring Ministown or Midnightstown (p. 37).

In 1342 (17th October), he was again recalled from retirement to fill the office of second justice of the Bench. He seems to have held this office until 1346, receiving in 1344 a special allowance of 12 marks for his expenses while attending on the King's business. He died before 1350, probably in 1346, in which year we find his brother William granting his possessions in Preston to Roger's son Robert, which he had before given to Roger. His death in this year would also explain the reason for the appointment by Robert, the son, in 1346, of attorneys to look after his affairs in Ireland, which if his father had died would mean taking possession of his father's property on the part of his son and heir.

Roger, as already mentioned, married Matilda, daughter of one Robert, son of Adam of Preston, and his wife Margaret Banastre (p. 108). Her brother Albred, or Albric, owned much property in Preston, and was one of the bailiffs or chief magistrates of that town in 1320. He seems to have acted as agent for Roger during his absences from the town. He married one Alice, or Agnes, but probably had no family, as Matilda, wife of Roger, is described as his heir. In 1350 Matilda is found giving her lands, messuages, and tenements in Preston inherited from her brother, and which she had, the gift of her mother, to her son Robert.

In 1359 to 1361 we find her in Dublin acquiring a stone house and plots of ground in that city, described as in the lane running from Fishers' Street (Fishamble-street) to the Church of St. Mary del Dam (at Cork Hill). These plots probably represent the large space known afterwards as Preston's Inns. Matilda had probably died by 1364, when Robert de Preston is found dealing with some of this property.

Robert, son of the judge, Roger de Preston, followed in his father's footsteps in adopting the legal profession. As a youth he may have acquired his first experience in his father's court in Dublin. But he must early have gone to England to pursue his studies, and gain sufficient experience for his future career. In 1346 he was in England, and is found appointing attorneys to look after his affairs in Ireland. But at this time he seems to have contemplated making Preston his headquarters, for we find him acquiring property there in 1344, 1345, 1346, and 1350.

In 1353 he married Margaret, then only thirteen years of age, only surviving daughter of Sir Walter de Bermyngham of Castlecarbury, Co. Kildare, who had been Justiciar of Ireland a few years previously, 1346-1349, and who died in England in the year following his retirement from office. A kinsman of Sir Walter's wife, Sir Thomas de Multon, was lord of Gilsland, near Preston. Perhaps at his place Robert may have met his future wife. This lady did not, at her marriage, bring her husband any landed property, but as her father and step-brother were wealthy, she no doubt had a good marriage portion.

In 1355 Robert is found in Ireland occupying the very responsible position of counsel for the King; going with the Justiciar to represent the King's interests at the sittings of his courts through the country, and acting as justice of assize. That these duties were performed with ability and fidelity may be assumed from the fact that in October, 1358, he was appointed to the important position of Chief Justice of the Bench, or Court of Common Pleas, an office which he continued to hold for more than twenty years.

On St. Laurence's day, 1361, Walter de Bermyngham, the younger, died; and his sister Margaret, Robert de Preston's wife, became heiress to the estates of the Bermynghams of Carbury in co. Kildare. She, too, however, died the same year, the annalists say on the vigil of St. Margaret; but as this would make her predecease her brother, whom she is stated in legal documents to have survived, the day must be an error. As St. Margaret's day was her birthday, and as her father is elsewhere said to have died on the vigil of St. Margaret, some confusion may easily have arisen about the day of her death. She was buried in the Church of the Friars Preachers of Drogheda. It may be of some significance that this year, in which both brother and sister died, was one in which the plague was particularly severe in this country.

Robert, on the death of his wife, became nominally owner of the Bermyngham estates, which had been found by Inquisition on the death of his brother-in-law to include the manor of Kells, co. Kilkenny; the manor of Castlecarbury, and two parts of the manor of Carrick, co. Kildare. But the lawless inhabitants of Carbury resisted his claims, and the only considerable portion of the estates which seem to have come to him was the manors of Kells and Shanbo.

In the same year Lionel, Duke of Clarence, came to Ireland as chief governor. One of his earliest expeditions was against the OByrnes of Wicklow. Chief Justice Preston took part in the attack, and towards the end of the year was knighted by the Duke for his prowess.

In 1363 he entered into negotiations for the purchase of Gormanston. This manor had been granted in 1230 to Aumary, or Almaricus de St. Amand. It was then described as four carucates of land, called le Ryn, and was said to have belonged to an Irishman named Ma Gorman (or, according to Lynch, Ua Gorman).

The owner in 1363 was a namesake of the original grantee. He had been Justiciar of Ireland a few years previously, 1357-8, and on leaving office had retired to his English property. The threatened measures against absentee owners had no doubt made him anxious to escape the dangers and liabilities attaching to property in Ireland, and he must have been glad to find a substantial purchaser in the Chief Justice, whom he must have known well: while to Sir Robert, Gormanston, lying on the borders of co. Meath and Dublin, offered a suitable seat for his property, chiefly situated in the adjoining eastern part of co. Meath, while still within easy reach of the capital.

Sir Robert must have taken special pride in his knowledge of conveyancing, for the deeds connected with the transfer of his new purchase are of unusual number, length, and complexity. They occupy no fewer than six pages of the Register. Sir Robert already possessed Ministown, Stameen, and Kenraghston, acquired by his father. He had himself before this time added Rolandstown, Gafney, and Richardstown. At a later date he purchased Rogerstown, Tankardstown, Donacarney, and Ninch. Most of these lands lie in the barony of Duleek, in the east of the County of Meath. Gormanston, situate in the same barony, partly extending into county Dublin, was suitably placed to look after the estate, and to be the chief manor and seat of the property. It was also within convenient distance of the capital. Unfortunately this advantage did not continue of so much importance to Sir Robert. As early as 1346 it had been felt that, owing to the decline of English interest in the north of Ireland, Dublin had been thrown out of the centre of affairs, and it had become desirable to seek a new seat for the King's courts, more accessible to the southern districts. Duke Lionel had in 1361 determined to transfer to Carlow the sittings of the Courts of Common Pleas and Exchequer. £500 was spent in fortifying that town. In 1365 or 1366 the transfer was effected, and there they remained all the time that Sir Robert presided in the Bench: they were restored to Dublin in 1395.

At the time of his wife's death, and Sir Robert's consequent accession to the Bermyngham estates, nothing is told of the measures taken by him to take effective possession of them. It is said that his claims were wholly rejected by the tenants and the other members of the Bermyngham family. Matters were brought to a crisis in 1367, when the Bermynghams of Carbury made open war on the men of Meath, and Sir Robert, who was their nominal lord, felt it his duty to endeavour to restrain them. He therefore, at much cost, put a strong force into Castlecarbury at once, to punish those who had broken the King's peace, and to assert the legal rights of ownership which had devolved on him in right of his wife. His efforts were so unsuccessful that, in the following year, while a parley was being held with them, the rebellious Bermynghams succeeded in taking prisoner the Lord Chancellor. And to secure his safety, one of the Bermynghams, who was a prisoner in the castle of Trim, had to be released in exchange for him.

On the accession of Richard II, Sir Robert was re-appointed Chief Justice of the Bench. He was soon after removed, but continued to be employed on important commissions, and to be summoned to Parliament as a councillor. Thus in 1384 he was commissioned a justice to inquire of seditions in Meath and Louth.

In 1388 the Lord Chancellor, Alexander de Balscot, bishop of Meath, having been appointed Justiciar, Sir Robert was made Keeper of the Great Seal, and was directed to destroy the seals of the recently disgraced Marquis of Dublin. In the following year, 1389, the Bishop of Meath having again been appointed Chancellor, Sir Robert was directed to deliver to him the Seal. At the same time he was honoured by being authorized to take the place of the Justiciar, sitting in the Exchequer with the Treasurer. In the same year his son Christopher was empowered to act as one of the deputies of his father for the custody of the Great Seal.

In 1391 the Bishop of Meath was again sworn Justiciar, and Sir Robert again appointed Keeper of the Great Seal, with the usual fee, and the issues of the Seal, as Irish Chancellors have hitherto done. He was at the same time appointed Chancellor of the Green Wax of the Exchequer, which office he was to execute in person.

This is the last recorded reference to Sir Robert. He died in 1396, having spent nearly forty years in important public service in Ireland.

Sir Robert married, secondly, Johanna Hügeley. Nothing is told of her family. The name, however, is one which is met in Dublin records about this time. In return for her surrender of all claims on the estate (p. 22), Sir Christopher established his step-mother in a dower house in Drogheda, in St. Laurence Street, with an orchard, garden, and other belongings, together with the lands of Rogerstown and Stameen. On p. 3 she is referred to as "lady Jo," and the allowance made to her is stated as 50 marks. She must have been the mother of Sir Robert's second son Robert, who was to hold the dower lands in reversion.

Christopher, eldest son of Sir Robert, succeeded to his father's estates on his death; and in the following year, 1397, he obtained a confirmation of them under the King's Charter under the Great Seal of England (p. 87).

About the same time he was, by special favour, granted exemption for life from being put on assizes, juries, &c., from being made knight, seneschal, sheriff, mayor, bailiff, escheator, coroner, keeper of the peace, knight of the shire for Parliaments or councils, &c., or other offices of the King, against his will. In the same year he was knighted, it is said, on the field.

One of Christopher's first acts when he took possession of the estates seems to have been to examine the contents of the muniment chest. He had for a time been connected with the Chancery as deputy-keeper of the Great Seal, and he may have borrowed one of the clerks of the Chancery to commence the transcription of the title-deeds into this Register.

He had married Elizabeth, daughter and co-heiress of Sir William de London, who died in 1386, the last of a family who for the greater part of two centuries had occupied a prominent place in Irish affairs. By this marriage he acquired a share of the barony of Naas, and also of the manor of Athboy. Sir William's grandmother was eldest co-heiress of the last lord of the senior male line of Maurice fitz Gerald, who took so prominent a part in the Norman conquest of Ireland.

In 1402 Sir Christopher was one of the Justices of the Peace for the county of Meath. In the next year he was appointed one of the deputies of the Lord Lieutenant to assemble the people for defence of that county. He died in the year 1422, leaving Emeline, his widow, and Christopher, his heir.

It does not form part of our duty to pursue the history of the Preston family further. The grandson of Sir Christopher was created Viscount of Gormanston in 1478, by patent entered in the Register, the text of which is given at p. 175 of the Calendar.

An outline of the descent of the heads of the family is found on folio 137 of the Register, and has been continued by later notes, down to the seventeenth century (Calendar, p. 110). There is also a sketch pedigree at p. 15.

GERALDINE, DE LACY, and DE LONDRES DOCUMENTS.

As we have remarked, the muniment chest at Gormanston held open its cover for many documents other than the title-deeds of the lands actually held by the Prestons.

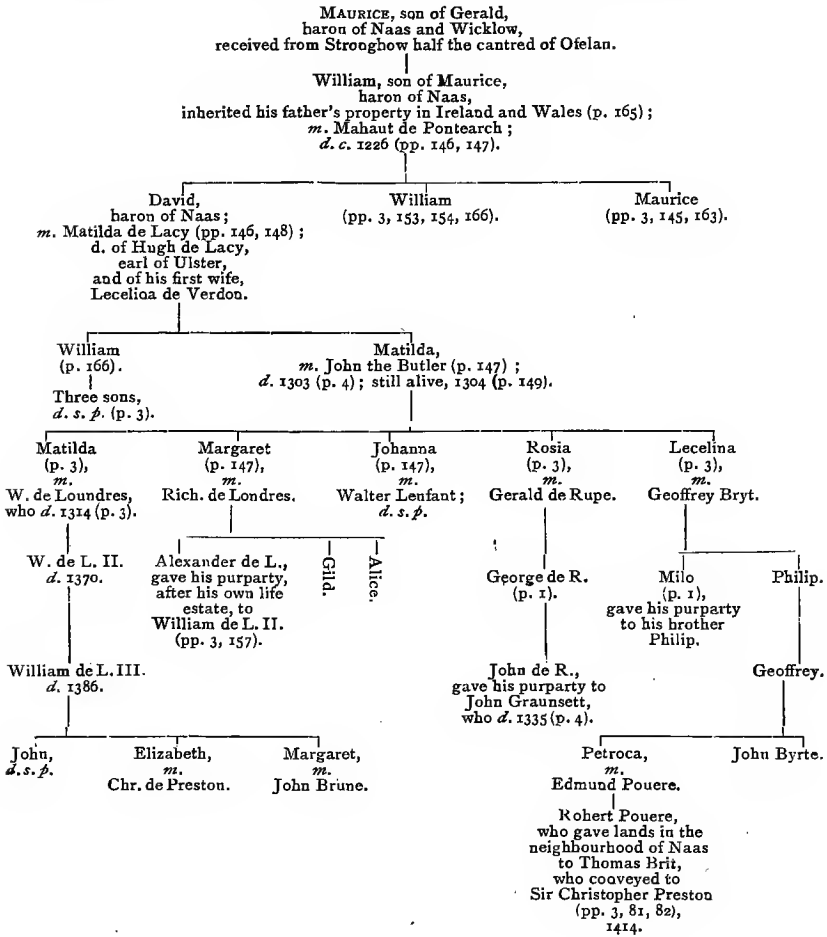

Sir Christopher's marriage with the elder co-heiress of Sir William de London was the occasion of the bringing in of many parchments of great interest. The family of De Londres, or of London, had been prominent in Ireland for the greater part of two centuries. Its descent during this time is given in the ancient genealogical table preserved on p. 16. The first of the name there, John Londyrs, is said (p. 150) to have been a nephew of the celebrated Henry de Londres, the great Archbishop of Dublin, 1214-28. Probably through the influence of his powerful uncle, who was more than once Justiciar of Ireland, John succeeded in securing as wife Nicola, the sole heiress of — Tuit, lord of Athboy. He thus took his place among the barons of the great lordship of Meath. It must have been through this connexion that the group of very interesting documents relative to Meath (pp. 4-15) found their way into the collection.

William de Londres, the son of this marriage, married Matilda, eldest co-heiress of Matilda, sole daughter and heiress of David, third baron of Naas, and thus the direct representative of the eldest son and heir of Maurice fitzGerald, hero of the Norman Invasion of Ireland. With this marriage came to De Londres, and ultimately into the Gormanston chest, the interesting documents connected with FitzGerald's (pp. 141-170), extending back, in one case, beyond even the Invasion of Ireland, to the time when Maurice obtained the stewardship of the lands belonging to the bishopric of St. David's.

The third baron of Naas had married the daughter of Hugh de Lacy, Earl of Ulster, by his first wife, Lecelina de Verdun. From this connexion a large number of important documents of the De Lacys, De Verduns, and FitzGerald's came to be included (pp. 141-174).

The accompanying table shows the descent of the De Prestons from Maurice FitzGerald, as appears in the documents in this Register.

DESCENT OF THE INHERITANCE OF MAURICE, SON OF GERALD (p. 3).

The documents connected with the marriage of De Lacy with Lecelina de Verdon, and conveying her very extensive marriage portion, are set out at length (pp. 144 and 146). These lands were inherited by the daughter and only child of the union. But, although the grant of the earldom to De Lacy gives it to him, and "his heirs" (p. 141), the Crown appears to have treated it as a gift in tail male, for no part of the possessions of the earldom seems to have been inherited by his daughter.

The facts and dates in this pedigree are taken from the statements and documents in the Register. Some of these conflict with particulars from other sources. Especially is this the case with the family of Matilda la Botillere, the heiress of David, baron of Naas. In legal proceedings in 1302 three of this lady's daughters, Matilda, Margaret, and Johanna, are stated to be the daughters and heiresses of Alexander de Nottingham, of whom there is no mention in the Register. The daughter, Matilda, too, was wife of the first William de London, who, according to the Register, lived until 1314. Yet, in the Justiciary Roll of 1302, he is represented as already dead, and Matilda, his widow, is married to John de Boneville.

DE BERMINGHAM DOCUMENTS.

The marriage of Sir Christopher's father, the Chief Justice, with the heiress of Sir Walter de Bermyngham, though equally brilliant with his son's match, did not add so materially to the family estates.

Sir Robert de Bermyngham, one of the first Norman conquerors, was rewarded by Strongbow for his services by a grant of the lordship of Offaly. There is some uncertainty as to the earlier generations in the descent from Sir Robert. But descendants in the thirteenth century are found styled lords of Toutemoy (Tuath-da-mhuighe), represented now by the north-east corner of the present King's County, and probably included in the term Offaly in its widest use.

The lord of this district at the end of the thirteenth century was Peter son of James son of Peirs (or Peter). Peter died in 1308, and his fame was celebrated by a poem still extant in the Harleian collection. He would seem to have been succeeded in the lordship of Toutemoy by a son, John, afterwards created earl of Louth. A son, William, became lord of Carbury, an adjoining district in the north-west of the present County of Kildare, and not included in the country of Offaly.

William was also an active supporter of the Government. So late as 1331 he had a royal letter asking his assistance as one of the magnates of Ireland, and about the same time he received the honour of knighthood. Yet, in the following year, he was seized by the Justiciar at Clonmel, and with his son, Walter, committed to the Castle of Dublin. After lying there for three months William, without any recorded statement of his alleged crime, was executed. The annalist, mourning his loss, says that "the lord William was a noble knight among a thousand thousands, and most noblest in feats of arms."

Sir Walter, son of William, after further detention, was released in 1334 by order from England, on finding hostages and mainpernors for good conduct.

Not, however, until 1337, and on entering into a recognizance in £1000 for good behaviour, were his father's lands, which on his execution were held to have escheated to the Crown, restored to him. This recognizance remained in force until after his death. In the same year he received a letter of aid among the magnates of Ireland. About the same time he married Elizabeth, widow of Robert de Haveryngton (written "Harington" in the Register), and one of the three daughters and co-heiresses of Sir John de Multon, who possessed extensive estates in Cumberland, Lincoln, and other English counties, and—through his wife, a daughter of Richard de Burgo, the great Earl of Ulster—in Co. Limerick. Elizabeth had an heir by her first husband, Robert de Haveryngton or Harington (p. 15), so that, although Sir Walter possessed her lands for life, they did not descend to his children. The longest document in the Register is the minute description of the share of the Irish lands (pp. 111–115) occupying six pages of the Register. The similar partition of the English estates is set out on the English Close Rolls. It is so long that even the printed abstracts occupy thirteen pages of the Calendar.

For some years Sir Walter remained on his estates in England, until in June, 1346, he was sent to Ireland as the King's Justiciar or Chief Governor.

Sir Walter had been promised a reward for previous service in Ireland under the Justiciar, Sir R. D'Ufford, so he now took the opportunity of conferring on himself the manor of Kells in Co. Kilkenny, which had recently been forfeited by the attainder and execution of Sir Eustace le Poer. Lest this grant should be challenged as irregular, it received special confirmation in England. This charter and the evidence of the forfeiture of the previous owner are set out at pp. 127, 128.

In 1347 he was, as Justiciar of Ireland, summoned to be present at the Parliament of England to give his counsel.

In 1349 he retired from the Government to his English property, where in the following year he died, on the vigil of St. Margaret's Day, leaving behind him the reputation of having been a very good Lord Justice. He was succeeded in his family property by his only son, Walter, a minor.

Sir Walter's wife's estates passed to her son and heir, John, by her first husband, Robert de Haveryngton.

In 1357 Walter, the son, was given seisin of his father's land, though not yet of full age; and the king, by favour, took his homage.

Walter, the son, died on St. Laurence's Day, 1361, seised of the manor of Kells, Co. Kilkenny, and the manor of Shanbo in the same county.

This was the finding of a jury of Co. Kilkenny, who could only find for the lands in their own county. His heir was his sister, Margaret, wife of Robert Preston (p. 124). Another inquisition found him seised of the manors of Castlecarbury and Carrick, Co. Kildare.

THE REGISTER.

This ancient volume of entries of early muniments is a volume in an ancient binding of heavy oak boards covered with stamped calf-skin. It contains 223 parchment folios, measuring each approximately 10 $\frac{1}{2}$  inches by 7 $\frac{1}{2}$  inches.

The folios are numbered in a nearly contemporary hand 1 to 224, but no folios bear the numbers 166 and 222, while 207 is repeated on a second folio.

The book seems to have been prepared or begun in 1397-8 for the purpose of registering the title-deeds of the property inherited or acquired by Sir Christopher Preston. It would appear to have originally commenced with the folio numbered 13, the heading of which may be regarded as the title of the book in its original form: "Hec est copia cartarum domini Cristofori de Preston militis facta anno r. r. Ric. secundi vicesimo primo."

From this folio number 13 to 187, the book is divided into sections grouping under headings of the names of the several manors, the charters affecting the ownership of each. These headings are represented in the following Calendar by the names of the manors in full capitals. At the end of each section are usually one or more blank pages left for the addition of later deeds relating to that particular manor. These blanks occur as the following folios of the original Register:—12, 38, 43, 58, 63 d, 66 d, 72 d, 100, 101 d, 102, 137 d to 140 d, 162, 163, 175 d to 179 d, 184 to 187 d, 213. Two other pages, 100 d and 101, which had originally been left blank, are occupied by entries made in a later hand.

The sections by manors are as follows:—

The folios before 13 were either originally left blank or were subsequently added on a rebinding of the book. They contain a less formal collection of entries, notes, and pedigrees made during the first half of the fifteenth century, with a few slight additions later.

The principal section of this part is from folio 5 to 9. It is written in a good set hand, better formed and more regular than any other in the book. This section includes the group of interesting articles relating to the Liberty of Meath beginning at the foot of p. 5 of the Calendar, and ending at the top of p. 14. Here there is a marked break in the Register, almost all the face of the folio being left blank.

The remaining entries in this first part of the Register are written by several hands in poor and irregular Court hand, with the exception of the Memorandum as to the ownership of the Bog of Balmartene (p. 5), which is in a coarse current hand.

The entries appearing at the top of page 2 of the Calendar are of special interest from the fact that they were most probably made by Sir Christopher himself, or at least at his dictation. The hand is a Court hand which we would not expect to find used by a private gentleman. Yet, as he seems to have acted for a time as deputy to his father when Keeper of the Great Seal, it is possible that he may have learned a hand which is not unlike that used on the Patent Rolls of the period.

These entries relate to the value of the property at this time and the nature of the charges upon it. Sir Christopher's stepmother is mentioned as the lady Johanna, and her son as "brother Robert," a form which could only be used by Sir Christopher. Of "Sister Ka," who appears to have had a charge of £10, we have no other tidings. Thomas Preston and Thomas Bakon also appear from other entries to have been cousins.

The notes on the lower part of p. 2, relative to the precedence of Sir Christopher and his ancestors over the Flemings, barons of Slane, are remarkable. The dispute became acute half a century later, and was decided in Parliament in favour of the Prestons from their tenure of the barony of Kells in Ossory. The notes given here give no support to this theory, for they begin with sittings by Sir William de Bermyngham, who never held the manor. Sir Robert Preston's sittings, too, would appear to have been as a privy councillor, not as a baron.

The clerks who transcribed the principal section of the Register, folios 13-187, were very indifferent Latin scholars, and their work is full of errors. These are so numerous that the production of a complete text would have proved a very unsatisfactory work. They were wholly unskilled in the reading of the handwriting of the older charters, the capital letters especially proving hopeless stumbling-blocks. As a result many of the less familiar names, such as those of the witnesses, are so misrepresented as to be often wholly unrecognizable in the forms in which scribes of the Register have preserved them.

The several sections of the principal portion of the book (folios 13-187) are introduced by ornamental capitals, decorated with flourishes which sometimes take the forms of grotesque faces or heads.

At the top of folio 11 is written "Jhus"; and at the top of folio 183 "Ihs mercy". At the foot of folio 68 the scribe has made a note of the words for the principal points of the compass :

|------------|------------|--------|-------------|
| " Est      | vest       | suth   | north "     |
| " orientem | occidentem | astrum | aquilonem." |

From folio 188 to 219 the Register has been used for entering, in the same hand, various muniments belonging to the families with which the Prestons formed alliances, though in most cases the property did not descend to them. From folio 220 to the end of the book these are continued in a different and probably somewhat later hand.

The Society has to acknowledge the goodness of the late Right Honourable Jenico, 14th Viscount of Gormanston, in giving permission to publish this volume, and for generously defraying the expense of making the transcription from which the Calendar was formed. The interest taken in the work by Georgina, Viscountess of Gormanston, and Jenico, 15th Viscount, has been very helpful.

The editors are greatly indebted to Mr. Thomas J. Morrissey, LL.B., for his kindness in preparing the exhaustive index to this volume.

CHARTER OF LIBERTIES GRANTED TO THE MAGNATES OF MEATH BY SIR GEOFFREY DE GEYNVILLE. f. 5.

Having considered the charters and muniments of his magnates of Meath, and their ancestors, those who first came into Ireland with Hugh de Lacy senior at his conquest, likewise those who were enfeoffed by Walter de Lacy son of said Hugh, Geoffrey by consent of Matilda de Lacy

f. 5. his wife grants that, like their ancestors, the said magnates and their heirs and those holding of them, determine in their courts, pleas of vetitum namium of all tenants in their lands. If in the lands of the magnates hue and cry be raised, the sheriff of Trum shall take inquisition whether such trespasses belonged to the crown or not: trespasses belonging to the crown shall be determined in the court of Geoffrey and Matilda; those which do not shall be determined in the courts of them in whose tenements they arise.

Geoffrey and Matilda grant to the magnates and their heirs and those holding of them the chattels of their Irishmen convicted of any delict and felony, although judged in the court of Geoffrey or Matilda. They grant also to the magnates and their tenants to whom it is fitting, to have waif when found on their lands, and the taking of amends for measures not observed, so that falseness be not found in the measures. The sheriff of Trum shall hold his tourn in the lordship of the magnates twice a year or oftener if necessary. Geoffrey and Matilda grant all these liberties of pure good will; and that they may remain for ever, confirm the charter with Geoffrey's seal. Witnesses—Patrick, archbishop of Armagh &c. ## TRANSCRIPT OF THE WRITING OF MARINERSTOWN.

Walter de Lacy, lord of Meath, for the salvation of his soul and of lady Marion his wife, and for the souls of Hugh de Lacy, and Rohesia, his father and mother, Robert de Lacy his brother, and Gilbert his son, and the souls of all his ancestors, has granted to God and the abbey of St. Mary, of Furness in England, and the Abbot and monks serving God there, in perpetual alms, the whole land which belonged to Christiana, wife of Robert le Mariner in the town of Mariners in Ireland, near the port of Drogheda, to wit, the messuage there where Christiana, after the death of Robert, dwelt, in the same town, and all other messuages which belonged to her in said town; with the nativi and their following; also the principal messuage which Robert held of him in capite near the church, and the stone tower there; and a third part of the mill of same town; and a boat in the fishery in the port and outside the port, free from any disturbance; and 90 acres of land with meadow and turbarry in the territory of said town, with all appurtenances and easements as well under as above ground. Writ, that the seneschal do not permit anyone to sell lands, unless he enter them before the other have full seisin.

G. de Geynvill to his seneschal of Trim. We command you that if any of our seignory wish to sell fee or tenement to hold of him, that you put yourself therein before the other have full seisin, and if the other wish to take a writ of novel disseisin, that you answer that you do not claim to have fee or freehold, but that you wish only that our right be not amoved, nor that the thing be held by interloperment. And by this answer you shall not hurt the land of Rathtoutthe, nor suit or service by the Lady nor by Mons. Roger, until you have other command of us, for we wish to have counsel, by whose hand it is more profitable for us to receive. See Text, p. 181.

For the reminder of the seignor or of the seneschal of franchise, when he may make truce with Irish felons, burners, with whom we are at war, if his justice can punish them of right. I say no, and one can understand this by the franchises of Wales; whereof the seignors of the franchises when war was general between the English and Welsh often made truce with the Welsh, who never were punished, whereas the King and his Council well knew this. And this was recorded by Mons. Walter de Hopton, then justice in England, on the morrow of the Nativity of our Lady, a. r. xii<sup>o</sup>, at Aroch, who said that when King Henry shut up the castle of Ganneu, because so great a multitude of Welshmen came near the army, it was demanded by the Council why it was there. It was said that because the great men, marchers, had truce with them. And because the Council were not clearly of opinion that they (the marchers) were not entitled to do so, the earl of Leicester caused Mons. Robert Waleran to be called, because he knew the march, and he was then a serjeant there; he asked his advice, and he said if he wished to do well, he should send the marchers each to his march, and command them that each should war in right of his faith. And the Earl said that this was the better counsel; and then Mons. Robert was retained of the counsel of the King. By which it may be well understood, that since the King, who then was in host upon the Welsh, and his Council knew that many of the great men marchers had truce with the enemies, upon whom he was in arms; and they were not reprehended or punished. So when the lords of franchise have truce with any of the Irish at war, upon whom the King, or his justice, or others with his banner, are not riding, they ought not to be punished any more than those Marchers were who made truce with the Welsh upon whom the King himself was at war. See Text, p. 181.

Judgment as to prey taken in the marches. Adam le Petyt, Richard son of John, Adam de Cusac, William de Alneto, Robert de Mandeville, Thomas de Molendinis, Hugo Huese, lord of Galletrum, William de London, Philip Teling, Richard de Burley, Henry son of Leons', and Richard Maueysin, say that they who are maintained in all things upon the cost of the lord, if they take horses or other animals, that the lord ought to have half, and they who are upon his cost have the other half, unless it shall be that they overthrow anyone from his horse by stroke of lance. And if they overthrow anyone by stroke of lance, then he shall have all those horses from which they shall have thrown the knights. And if they take prisoners, all prisoners shall remain to the lord. And if the lord or his seneschal shall be there present, then they shall have nothing, unless the lord will to give it of grace. (Circa 1290.) See Text, p. 182.

IN THE 21ST YEAR OF KING RICHARD II.

GORMANSTON.

Indenture of covenants upon acquiring the manor of Gormanston by R. de Preston from A. de S. Amand, and of having the ancient charters, records, and muniments.

(French) Indenture witnesses that whereas Mons. Ammari de Seint Amant the father, and Mons. Robert de Preston are agreed of the bargain of the manor of Gormanston with the appurtenances; and Ammari has by his charters granted to Robert two rent charges, one of 60*l.*, the other of 30*l.* from his said manor, and has paid to Robert 12*l.* of one rent, and 6*d.* of the other, as by indented letters, in triplicate, appears; and has made charters of feoffment of said manor to Robert and his heirs, and to others by him named; and has made four letters of attorney to divers persons named by Robert, to deliver to Robert and his companions seisin of it, and of the 24 acres of land and one acre of meadow of which James de Passelewe made dispute; and also has made three releases of all his right in said manor. Which charters, deeds, and letters, mons. Ammari caused to be sealed in his presence with his own seal, and delivered them to said Robert. And Ammari has fully received of Robert all the sum agreed between them which he ought to have by the bargain. And Ammari undertakes to travel to the King's court as speedily as he can, and there acknowledge the two charters of rent charge, and the charter of feoffment, and the releases, and cause them to be enrolled, at the costs of Robert as to fees and reward of the clerks. And also undertakes that he will search all the ancient charters, muniments, records, and remembrances touching said manor which are with him, and deliver them to Robert. As often as Robert shall desire new securities of the manor, such as Ammari has already made, he shall make them at the costs of Robert. In testimony of which Ammari and Robert have to these indentures put their seals. Given on Wednesday, the morrow of the Assumption of our Lady in the 37th year of the reign of King Edward III. (16 Aug., 1363). See Text, p. 183.

And Ammari, the son, has granted, that in the event of the death of Ammari, the father, before Robert and the others named have received seisin of said manor, unless the taking of seisin remain through the default of Robert and the others, that should Ammary survive his father, he will cause to be sued out of the King's hand with all speed, and at the charges of the said Robert, the said manor with the appurtenances, which, by the death of Ammary, the father, ought to be seized into the King's hand. And, when he shall have it delivered out of the King's hand, he shall cause Robert and the others to be enfeoffed without delay, according to the intent of the charter of Ammary, the father, so that the said manor be as free from all charges, debts, and liabilities entered upon by Ammary, the son, as it was on the date of the bargain between Ammary, the father, and Robert. [Sir Christopher de Preston, knight] also has an inspeximus of a charter of R. de P[reston] and his fellows made to A. de St. A[mand] concerning the manner of warranty of a charter.

Tenor of a Record of divers parcels of land, meadow and pasture, in Balseaudan and Molawragh, recovered by Almaric de St. Amand against R. White and his fellows.

Edward III., King of England, lord of Ireland and Aquitaine, has inspected the tenor of a record of an assise of Novel disseisin, which he had caused to come into his Chancery.

Pleas of juries and assises at Newcastle of Lyons before Almaric de St. Amand, justiciar of Ireland, on Monday after the feast of St. Hilary a. r. xxxi. Ed. III. (17 Jan., 1358). Dublin. The assise comes to make known if Richard White, John Obroy, John Rossell, John Passelewe, and Robert Holywod disseised Almaric de St. Amand, senior, of his freehold in Balyscadan and Molaueragh. Whereupon he complains that they disseised him of 40 acres of land, 6 acres of meadow, and 12 acres of pasture, with the appurtenances. f. 17 d.

The said Richard, John Obroy and Robert come not, nor were they attached, because they were not found, nor have they bailiffs, nor anything by which they might be attached; therefore let the assise be taken against them by their default.

John Rosell and John Passelewe come and say that they did no injury or disseisin to Almaric, and put themselves on the assise. Almaric said he was in peaceful seisin of the premises, as of his freehold, until disseised by defendants, and likewise asked that it be inquired by the assise.

The jurors say on oath that Almaric was seised of 4 acres of land, and 2½ acres of meadow and pasture of the tenement put in view, until f. 17 d. Richard White and John Obroy forcibly disseised him of 2 acres of meadow and pasture, John Rosell disseised him of one acre of land, John Passelewe of 1 acre, and Richard White of 2 acres of land, and half an acre of pasture. Asked if Robert was at the making of the disseisin; they say no. Asked as to the residue of the tenements put in view, if plaintiff was seised, and disseised by defendants; they say no. Asked if the disseisin by John Rosell, John Passelewe, and Richard White, as to the  $2\frac{1}{2}$  acres was by force and arms; they say no. Asked as to damages; they say two marks for the  $2\frac{1}{2}$  acres of meadow and pasture, half a mark for the acre whereof John Rosell made disseisin, and 10s. for the acre whereof Richard White made disseisin.

Therefore it is adjudged that Almaric recover the premises and damages aforesaid, that said Richard and John Obroy be taken for their forcible disseisin, and the others be in mercy for their disseisins; that plaintiff be in mercy for his false claim against Robert, and the excess of his claim.

Afterwards plaintiff having acknowledged in court that he had been satisfied for his damages against Richard, the latter was admitted to make fine for 40*d.*, for gaol remitted, by pledge of Gilbert son of Richard White.

And at the request of said Robert de Preston, knight, the tenor of said Record and process is exemplified.

Assise come to make known if David Candelan, Margery daughter of John fitz Milys, &c., unjustly disseised Robert de Prestoun, knight, of his freehold in Schanboth; and whereupon the said Robert by Walter Coterell his attorney complains that they disseised him of 80 acres of land and 80 acres of pasture with the appurtenances. And the said David &c. came not, and the sheriff was commanded to attach them for their default. Which [assise] comes and says upon oath that Robert de Preston, knight, was seised of the tenement now put in view, as of a freehold, &c., and that said David, Margery, Stephen, Robert, Patrick, David, Walter and Philip unjustly disseised him. Asked if said Walter vicar of Ballymagorme was at the making of the disseisin or not; they say no. Asked if it was made by force and arms or not; they say no. Asked concerning the damages; they say 40 pence damages and no more, because the land was improved and sown. Therefore it is adjudged that said Robert de Prestoun, knight, recover his seisin of the tenement now in view against said David, Margery, Stephen, Robert, Patrick, David, Walter and Philip; and his damages taxed by same assise at 40 pence; and the said David, Margery, Stephen, Robert, Patrick, David, Walter and Philip in mercy for the disseisin; and the said Robert de Preston, knight, in mercy for his false claim against Walter vicar of Ballymagorme.

And at the request of Robert de Prestoun, knight, the king caused the record to be exemplified by the tenor of these presents. f. 156.

Copy of enrolment of the Plea of adjudication of Eustace le Power and William Graunt, knights.

Pleas of the crown and gaol delivery at Castle Honde before Ralph de Ufford, justiciar of Ireland, on Monday next after the three weeks of St. Michael a. r. xix. Edward III.

Kerry to wit. Enstace le Poer, knight, and William Graunt, knight, were indicted that they with their following came to the towns of Donlay, Corran, Clonagh, and the Ilond in co. Kerry, on Thursday after Michaelmas aforesaid, and feloniously and against the peace burnt the said towns; and they were indicted of this, that after they had committed the said felonies, they put themselves in the castle of the Ilond, and that Ralph Ufford justiciar of the King in Ireland, on Friday after the three weeks aforesaid, having pursued them to the said castle, demanded entrance in the King's name, and required them to yield themselves up to the peace of the King, they refused to do so; and the said justiciar, for that reason, having beset the castle with the posse of the King, and approached it in his own person with the standard of the King displayed to subdue them as felons of the King, the said Eustace and William seditiously and contrary to their allegiance rose up against the said standard, assailed the justiciar and held the castle against the King and his justiciar, until the said castle was conquered by force by the justiciar, to the use of the King. They come and are asked how they wish to acquit themselves. They deny the entire felony, sedition and everything, and say they are in no wise guilty thereof, and for good and evil put themselves upon the country. A jury comes, and the jurors say on their oath, that said Eustace and William are guilty of the burning of the said towns, of the sedition aforesaid, and all the rest contained in the arraignment. It is therefore adjudged that they be drawn and hanged. (24 Oct. 1345.) See Text, p. 188. f. 160.

charter of his grandfather John, then earl of Mortain; and three other charters.

i. John earl of Mortain, lord of Ireland, has granted to Robert Ruffus for his homage and service, the manor of Ballymacdon with the appurtenances; to hold to him, his heirs, donees or assigns, of grantor and his heirs, with the fee and inheritance; rendering yearly to grantor and his

ii. Robert Russus has granted to Roger the Cordwainer a moiety of f. 164.
the land of Ballymacdon with its appurtenances; to hold to him and his heirs of grantor and his heirs, freely, quietly and fully, in meadows, feedings &c., and in all the liberties and free customs thereto belonging; rendering therefor yearly to the King at Dublin, at Michaelmas, a leather greave, or 12 pence, as the entire land ought to render two to the King.
For this grant Roger gave 35 marks, for which grantor and his heirs are bound to warrant. Sealed by grantor. Witnesses, Hugh de Lacy, Henry Byset, Geoffrey Luterel, John la Ware, Elyas Long, Nicholas son of

iii. Robert Ruffus has granted to William the Cordwainer, a moiety

iv. William the Cordwainer son of Elyas the Cordwainer has released the manor of Ballimacdon, with the appurtenances. In witness he has caused these letters to be made patent. Witnesses, Elyas Long, Thomas Beneg', William son of Nicholas, Richard Coy. (Cir. 1206.)

lies. Witnesses, sirs Robert Waleraund, William de Leyburne, Otto de

f. 164 d. Declaration of the manner in which the manor of Balymadon descended from John the Cordwainer to John de la Hyde.

M[aurice] son of Gerald, justiciar of Ireland, to Henry King of England, lord of Ireland, duke of Aquitaine and Normandy, and count of Anjou. He has received the King's mandate as follows:—

Henry, &c., to Maurice son of Gerald, justiciar of Ireland. We command you by the oath of good and lawful men to cause diligent enquiry to be made from what time the ancestors of William the Cordwainer who claims right in the vill of Balymadon were enfeoffed of same vill, and from whom, and if he was enfeoffed after the death of his ancestors; and if William has right in it, by what descent ought it to belong to him, which ancestor last held said vill, on what occasion and for what reason did it come into the King's hand so that he could give it to Ralph de Trubervill without injury to William or any other to whom it ought to descend; and if not forfeited for felony or other action, on what account did it come into the King's hands. To send the King a most trustworthy inquisition thereon, &c., and this writ; and meanwhile to cause said vill to be safely kept so that the issues thereof may be fully answered for at the Exchequer until other order. Witness the King at Wyndlesoure 26 April a. r. xxix. Hen. III. (1245.)

f. 165. By authority thereof he caused inquiry to be made by William Rosel, Geoffrey de Trevers, Robert son of Fulc, Nicholas de Felda, Alexander the Frenchman (Francigen'), Mimon de Legh, Michael de Angulo, Laurence de Bodenham, Almaric de Nugent, William Jord', Adam Holywood (Sancto Bosco), and Geoffrey de Widinton, who say on their oath that William the Cordwainer grandfather of William, the claimant, [was enfeoffed] in the time of King John then lord of Ireland, and by Robert Ruffus; and as to this, if William have any claim in said town, they say that King John then lord of Ireland granted to said Robert the entire town of Balymadon in fee and inheritance, and that Robert granted a moiety to William le Cordwainer, grandfather of claimant, in fee, who held it for life and was succeeded by his son and heir Elias, for his life, who was succeeded by his son and heir the claimant William, for 5 years; that afterwards, Robert Ruffus being dead, a bastard, the premises were taken into the King's hand as his escheat. As he was not of the Irish nation, they have not deposed with certainty concerning his bastardy or legitimacy, which can be more fully declared in England; but, as many coming from England say he was a bastard, the jurors believe he was bastard rather than legitimate. Thereupon they say that William the claimant has right in the premises if Robert was legitimate, but if he was bastard that William has no right because the feoffment of a bastard does not stand. If Robert was a bastard, as they understand, the King could give the premises to Ralph de Trubervill without injury to William the claimant or any other. And as to whom the premises ought lawfully to descend, they say that the said Ralph after he had bee enfeoffed of the said town by the King's charter, as an estate of inheritance, granted it to John le Cordwainer, for his homage and service, and for his money, in fee and inheritance, by an increase of rent from 60s. to 10 marks yearly; which John held it for life and being dead, Ralph took the premises into his hand, on the death of his man and tenant, and retained it for his life; and after him Henry de Trubervill for his life, and after him William de la Lund for his life. That John the Cordwainer died seised in his demesne as of fee and right, and his right descended to Agnes his sister and heir; on her death, to Matilda her daughter and heir, and, on her death, to John de la Hyde son and heir of said Matilda. And they say that if they have not been forfeited for felony or other cause, the premises were not forfeited, but are the King's escheat as above mentioned. And the Justiciar transmits to the King the inquisition so made under the seals of himself and the jurors; "valeat excellencia vestra Regia per tempora longiora." (1245.) f. 165.

Edward, King of England, lord of Ireland and duke of Aquitaine sends greeting to Edmund le Botiller his Justiciar of Ireland. When the King took the homage of John de la Hyde of Balimadon, on 11 June last past, for all the lands which he holds of him in Ireland as is the custom, he commanded the said Justiciar to restore the premises to John out of the King's hand, and not to permit him to be afterwards distrained. Now John shows that although the premises were delivered to him, the Justiciar has delayed to cause the issues received by the Escheator since that date to be delivered to him. The King commands the Justiciar to cause John to have these issues without delay. f. 165 d.

Last Inquisition concerning the dower of Aufrica (Auf) wife of John the Cordwainer recovered by J. de la Hyde.

Inquisition made by order of the lord Edward, on Friday the vigil of St. Clement a. r. xlvij. [Henry III] (16 Nov. 1263) before Richard Rupell', justiciar of Ireland, [and] master William de Bakepu escheator there, by the oath of Adam Locard, Bertram de la Felde, Almaric de Nugent, Nicholas de Houthe, Ralph Wittewel, Philip of Holywood, Ralph Baban, Thomas le Blund, Roger Aleyn, and Robert de Nugent who say on their oath that Aufrica, who was the wife of Roger Oweyn, held in Cordwainer's town (villa de Cordwainer) appertaining to the manor of Balmacdun, 140 acres of arable land, 20 acres of meadow and 42 acres of pasture and moor, belonging to said land, every acre of which they extend at 13d. yearly; and also 5 marks and 7 pence rent of assise there yearly; and she rendered, for royal service, a third of the service of half a knight's fee; and to the chief lord of the fee, a third part of a pair of leather greaves (ocrearum vaccinarum) yearly; she held these in the name of dower in the free tenement of John le Cordewaner her first husband, in Balymadon, and not of the King's grace, because she f. 167.

f. 167. recovered the premises as her dower by judgment of the court of the lord the King. They say lord Edward does not hold the premises, because in the lifetime of Aufrica, John de la Hyde succ William de Turberville in the court of said lord Edward, concerning 3 carucates of land and 9 marks, rent, with the appurtenances, in Balimaedon, put in his view the said land and rent which belonged to Aufrica, and recovered the said 3 carucates of land and 9 marks of rent by default of said William, and holds the land and rent aforesaid which belonged to Aufrica, because after said John had recovered seisin of the land and rent which he sought from William, Aufrica died, and after her death, the Escheator being in distant parts, John took seisin of said land and rent which belonged to her in Cordwainer's town; but the escheator having heard the matter, ejected John therefrom, took them into the hands of the lord Edward and retained them until at the complaint of John, by order of said Justiciar and the council of the lord Edward, he restored to said John the said land and rent which belonged to Aufrica. They say that the lord Edward cannot give the land and rent which belonged to Aufrica to any other, without prejudice to John who is in seisin thereof, and is heir of said John le Cordwainer. The jurors have affixed their seals.
